"In Old Kentucky,"

Manged by A. W. Dingwall, opened at the Haymarket Theatre to one of the greatest audiences ever assembled in a Chicago theatre, and proved to be the biggest "horse drama" ever presented in this city. The audience, tier upon tier, was quite as interesting a show as the entertainment on the stage, and never for a moment permitted time to drag. Everybody acting, from the leading lady down to the black race-horse, was cheered time and again, frequently interrupting the course of the play. "In Old Kentucky" is a modern melodrama, constructed by C. T. Dazey, two scene-painters and two engineers, and it is the best production of its class ever seen in Chicago. The company includes Edward Holland, Charles H. Bradshaw, Harry Mainhall, Laura Burt and Charlotte Winnett, all players of recognized ability and high standing. Act 1 shows a Kentucky mountain scene of much beauty and unfolds a plot in which the moonshine still, two murders, three pairs of lovers, a Kentucky Col. Sellers, a heavy villain with whiskers never grown in the Blue grass region, and a horse-race figure. Frank Layson, the hero, and Joe Lovey, the moonshiner, have a desperate struggle for life, in which a dynamite bomb takes an active part. Madge Brierly, the "flower of the mountain," in love with Frank Layson, saves the handsome young man from death, and the curtain drops to a roar of applause. Act 2 introduces a great delight in a band of young negroes who do "buck dancing" to their hearts content and shiver the atmosphere with instruments. The racemen's stable is fired by the villain, Madge saves the horse and another curtain falls to the tune of wild cheering. Act 3 shows the horse race for the Ashland Oaks, and all Lexington is there. The jockey of Queen Bess, the property of Frank Layson, is made drunk by the villain, and for a moment it seems as though the horse could not enter the race and so save her master from ruin by winning it, but Madge comes to the front again, dons the jockey's suit, rides the mare and wins the race. Such another race scene was never attempted on the stage. Five horses come on in a gallop, and the little darkies fall off amid the wildest confusion of men, women and horses, to which the audience adds by prolonged cheers. Act 4 shows the villain punished, the lovers all married and a genuine Kentucky love feast. Laura Burt easily carries the honors of the piece. Miss Winnett and Mr. Bradshaw furnish the comedy element, and it is exquisite from first to last. —Chicago Record, January 16, 1894.

Rock Haven.

About a year ago I took a violent attack of la grippe. I coughed day and night for about six weeks, my wife suggested I try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. At first I could see no difference, but still kept taking it, and soon found that it was what I needed. If I got no relief from one dose I took another, and it was only a few days until I was free from the cough. I think people in general ought to know the value of this remedy, and I take pleasure in acknowledging the benefit I have received from it. Madison Mustard, Otway, Ohio. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by J. W. Gayle, druggist.
